Easy to use facebook dating software. This application can find multiple female friends and close friends that you are interested in. You can get information about their age, occupation, education and other stuff. Users can also send messages, messages, send flowers and video clips. All these simple actions are more convenient. At this moment our team is working on an iOS push notification backend. Push notifications are a big deal for our users and we want to be able to deliver them on our Android app as well. The backend is not very far from being ready, but we're not quite ready to roll it out just yet. We will communicate when we will release the new backend, and when it's usable to be integrated into our Android app. In the meantime, we've reached an agreement with the Xamarin team regarding how we can submit Android push notifications when the new backend is ready. Our aim is to have the Android app send notifications to Xamarin's SystemUI with messages that are sent to the Google Cloud Messaging platform. A message can be sent from our iOS app to the Xamarin backend service and the iOS app will receive responses from the Google Cloud Messaging endpoint that can be validated before being sent to Android. This approach will enable us to immediately deliver push notifications to our users and do so on a platform that has a strong relationship with Google. Show HN: John's map of IBM over its own history - steven ===== AznHisoka There is one thing I'd like to see: who owns the patents that were acquired by IBM? Apple for example. What if Apple has an option to buy all of IBM's patent portfolio for a nominal fee? ~~~ steven I don't think Apple would ever agree to sell its portfolio, there are too many unique ones for that. ----- itazula Very cool. Are you including privately held patents as well? ~~~ steven No, only public ones. It would be an interesting exercise to do so, but I didn't want to add significant work and complexity to the project. There is also more information that I would like to have, such as the licenses that the patents are licensed under. For example, if we look at the column for the AT&T patents,

Suppression of G(2)-M checkpoint by PD-L2 expressed in a cancer cell. Programmed death-ligand 2 (PD-L2), a new member of PD-1 ligand family, was found to be expressed on a variety of cancer cells. However, its mechanism of function in tumor evasion remains to be further clarified. The present study shows that PD-L2 expressed on a human gastric cancer cell line MKN45 can also suppress cell cycle and induce a G(2)-M checkpoint. The checkpoint in PD-L2-expressing cells was blocked by anti-PD-L2 monoclonal antibodies or PI3K inhibitors. It was also blocked by cycloheximide (CHX), a protein synthesis inhibitor, indicating that it was a G(2)-M checkpoint. Western blotting showed that phospho-S10H3, a G(2)-M checkpoint protein, was induced by PD-L2 in MKN45 cells, suggesting that PD-L2 negatively regulates p-S10H3 protein to induce the G(2)-M checkpoint. The expression of PD-L2 was correlated with the expression of p-H3, a mitotic kinase. Furthermore, the PD-L2 protein was mainly expressed in the cytoplasm and the nuclear localization was confirmed by using nuclear transport inhibitor.
