The Supreme Court has made it clear that a company cannot be denied the opportunity to compete in the market unless there is a "substantial" anti-competitive effect or motive. But in a two-page analysis in the Michigan Law Review, Jeffrey L. Harrison, a University of Michigan law professor, argues that there is a "broad new duty for the government to protect consumers" if there is a substantial likelihood that a merger would reduce competition in any market. Your bones will soon be as brittle as the aging bones of your mother. New research from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Dartmouth College and Ohio State University finds that the bones of young women aged 30 and younger are significantly weaker than those of women aged 35 or older. The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, in an 8-to-1 decision, concluded that a school system cannot fire a teacher for criticizing the school board during a public meeting. During that meeting, a police officer had shot a student. The police officer had immunity, but the district fired the teacher. The teacher argued that his criticism was protected speech. When the government is supposed to assess whether a proposed merger is anti-competitive, it must be looking at the competitive situation as a whole, not just the market in which the business is operating. And the government must be looking at the situation in the long term.Linda Hensley

What's New in the Weighbridge Software?

* COM-port based weighing application * Weighbridge Software can record the gross weight on any object placed on the indicator. In order to determine the net weight, it takes into consideration the tare weight of the vehicle or box that carries the load. * Manage customers and suppliers * The application can keep track of all the customers and suppliers, storing their contact details (address, phone numbers, website). Moreover, it can record information concerning vehicles, the corresponding tare weights and the names of the drivers, as well as product prices, type, measurement units and quantities, making it easier for you to select the desired information when completing a form. * Its main window comprises accessible options, enabling you to specify the name of the customer and the vehicle, the name of the item, the payment mode and other similar details. For each weighing operation, a new ticket is created. * Generate reports * The integrated report generator can help you create various analysis reports regarding the input items, customers and suppliers, users, vehicles, which can be easily forwarded to managers and authorities. Furthermore, data can be easily exported to Excel. * Password protection guarantees data security and the impossibility to alter the defined configuration settings without authorization. The application supports multiple users and enables the administrator to customize the login passwords for each.
