Boulder Dash is the computer game from which gave this game a lot of inspiration. Super-duper-awesome is a character from Supaplex. Purrfect is the kind, adorable pixel-art style of the game. Boom and Mega-Kitty are from Supaplex. Antonius is a character from Supaplex. Kotzelcoatal is a character from Supaplex. Beauty from Supaplex is the main character of Boulder Dash and a role-model for the game! Categories: Pixel Games / Adventure Games Publisher: Kodelmo Developer: Kodelmo Genre: / Puzzle App store link: Google play link: The present invention relates to analog-to-digital converters (A/D's) and more specifically to an A/D converter design having an improved resolution with greater speed and having fewer interfaces. While many aspects of the present invention are applicable to all such converters, the invention finds particular utility for use with a flash analog-to-digital converter. A flash analog-to-digital converter (FADC) is used in many applications, one of which is an x-ray imaging system. A variety of FADC systems have been described, including systems using flash storage and systems using random access storage such as magnetic disk, optical storage and others. Prior FADC systems tend to suffer from relatively long conversion times, fixed data rates for digital data output, and low resolution. In designing a FADC system, the fundamental trade-offs are between speed and resolution. For a given conversion time, a higher resolution FADC system can generate an output digital signal with more bits of resolution per sample. FADC systems can be designed to minimize the maximum dynamic range of the analog signals that the converter must resolve, thus lowering the dynamic range requirements on the analog-to-digital converter (ADC). However, a larger number of bits per sample can resolve a smaller dynamic range of analog signal inputs. It is generally desirable to optimize FADC systems to minimize the dynamic range requirements of the ADC so that more dynamic range can be used for the analog signal inputs, thus further optimizing the system. Various techniques have been used in the prior art to minimize the time that must be spent by the ADC. For example, as described in U.S. Pat. No. 5,055

Performance evaluation of the newly developed alidade for measuring physical activity. Physical activity (PA) is defined as the activity of body movements that are energy consuming in the skeletal muscles. Two technologies that enable the accurate measurement of PA are accelerometers and calorimeters. In this study, we compared the accuracy of PA measurements recorded by a novel accelerometer with a commercially available calorimeter. The study population consisted of ten healthy male participants (22.9 +/- 0.8 years). Participants' PA was measured in three free-living conditions: sedentary while watching TV (SED-TV), sitting quietly while watching TV (SIT-TV), and walking. A novel alidade, which is composed of a compact electronic device and a 3D-printed holder that holds an accelerometer on the chest, was used to measure PA. PA was measured by both the alidade and the calorimeter simultaneously. Measurements were obtained for the same time (on a daily basis) in a laboratory and outdoors, and participants wore each device for three different periods, as described above. We determined the energy expenditure using the equation of 1.2 metabolic equivalents and compared the results between the alidade and the calorimeter. We also determined the PA recorded by the alidade by examining changes in PA when each of the 10 participants wore it. Bland-Altman plots revealed no significant bias in the alidade's measurement of the SED-TV and SIT-TV. The alidade's measurements of the SIT-TV (1.9 +/- 1.1 kJ x min(-1)) were significantly lower (P = 0.02) than those recorded by the calorimeter (3.0 +/- 0.5 kJ x min⁻¹). Mean differences of the energy expenditure measured in SED-TV, SIT-TV, and walking were 0.7 +/- 1.1, 1.2 +/- 1.0, and 0.5 +/- 0.4 kJ x min⁻¹,

What's new in Cat-o-Combo!:

(SSX) Mouse Poops McDo>Cat-o-Combo! is a DJ game for the Nintendo 64 and in the sequel of the show, Mouse Poops' nephew, Chocolate McDo, gets a summer vacation from his uni. Before he leaves on this vacation he recruits his pet cat Snow McDo (with his love of snowballs) to join the trip, and Snow on the mission to deliver "something" to Aunt Chocolate. The goal of the game is to kill all of the cats and finish the adventure in the quickest time possible. You must avoid the many obstacles that the cats come up, as well as various cats that will chase you down the mountain. You can also use a form of defence against the cats by heating up blocks (and the cat who lays eyes on them would run away after hearing the sound). In the sequel, new obstacles such as avalanches, volcanos, and untimely entrances of "fast" riders who are all a part of the game, make this game a diverse adventure for the DS. The game ends when all the cats are dead, or at the home base if there are still cats left. Enemies when knocked out lose points, and they gain points as an action is taken against them. The first cat who gets knocked out loses five points, and the same thing applies to the second knocked out. This "first-cat-knocked-out-five-points" concept can be seen in every part of the game, such as mission select or help. The cats will make the points accrued get cut in half, so that you can still make it through the levels if your judgement on the current mission is bad. To help increase the game's difficulty and increase the number of points awarded to first knocked out cats, certain levels can only be cleared if certain missions are enabled. One example of this is a level where you can only complete if a mission called "End Of Avalanche Hour" is enabled.

Other methods of difficulty also come in the form of the cheats found in the DS version. When a cheat is enabled, the game will automatically clear a mission if the mission is not possible without cheating. However, to return the game to the previous state after a cheat was enabled you'd have to hold down the R button until the DS beeps, and wait 20 seconds. This method was the only way to restore the game from its unpause state. Contents After clearing the main cave for the first time
