During the period of 1964 to 1978, 101 patients with mitral valve prolapse were studied for a mean period of 5.6 years. During this observation period, 33 patients had additional valvular disease (aortic and/or mitral disease in 30). Of the 103 patients, 12 died during the follow-up period (aortic or mitral disease causing death in 6), and 21 had a cardiac event (reoperation due to cardiac failure in 15 and mitral or aortic disease in 6). There was no difference in the cumulative survival between the patients with and without aortic or mitral disease. Also, no difference in the cumulative survival was found between the patients who underwent aortic valve replacement and those who underwent aortic or mitral valve replacement. However, the cumulative freedom from a cardiac event was higher in the patients who had aortic or mitral valve replacement than in the patients who underwent aortic valve replacement alone. The freedom from a cardiac event was also higher in the patients with than in those without additional
