upon a time, there was a slick, high-tech

WAK-A-MUNK!
Waking up at 6am to go to school; even at a young age, I knew the game. My strategy was simple; make it look like I was still a new little kid in the class, not yet fully grown. I would get out of bed, and immediately begin to move around the room to wake my brother up, who would want to stay in bed a little longer. Eventually, all you need to do is yell out, "Wake up, wake up, it's time to get up," and that would be it. Once he was up, he would help me get ready, and we would both head off to school. It was a method of working around the clock, especially since my school schedule was in the morning, and it made for a full and intense day. It was also a way for me to make sure that my parents didn't get upset, since I knew that I still needed to take care of them. They would leave the house, to their next work, and I had to make sure they were comfortable with me and the way I was waking them up. But even if they didn't, I still would. Now, I'm sure that you are probably thinking, "What a new and exciting way for a man to be living," and you would be correct. For those of you who don't know what I'm talking about, let me tell you a little about what I'm referring to: I'm talking about the state of a man's discipline and willpower when he is still a kid, and how it helps him later on in life. Now, you probably don't believe me, and the reason why is simple: you've never known a man who was a kid at the same time he was a man. I think I could even make a pretty good argument for the opposite, that a man who is a kid at the same time as a man is a prime candidate for entering the next life, since he will already be pure and unmoving.

Nevertheless, I'll continue to offer up my reason, and you're welcome to offer up yours, and we'll do battle, or I'll sing you an "Old MacDonald Had a Farm" song. OK, now, I'll save you the trouble; here it is: the dirty little secret

What's New In?

Pituitary stalk

agenesis and central diabetes insipidus following third cesarean section. We present the case of a neonate, born through a cesarean section at 37 weeks of gestation to a 30-year-old mother, who had central diabetes insipidus (CDI), pituitary stalk agenesis and persistent hyperprolactinemia. This anomaly was first found in the neonate after suffering from severe hypoglycemia with a serum prolactin level of 16.7 ng/ml. The baby was operated on immediately. While the causative lesions of CDI are not fully understood, a lack of contact between the hypothalamic water-synthesis center and the posterior lobe of the pituitary gland is considered to be the most important factor. We hypothesize that the hypogonadotropic hypogonadism resulted from the fact that the pituitary stalk had not been developed. CDI developed as a result of a lack of lactation, which limited the supply of human milk to the developing hypothalamic water-synthesis center. Continuous infusion of glucocorticoids for treating hypoglycemia is suggested to be safe. A Randomized, Double-blinded, Placebo-controlled Trial of Omega-3 Fatty Acids for the Treatment of Sleep Problems in Children. The purpose of this study was to compare the effects of fish oil versus a placebo on children's sleep patterns.

Children with sleep difficulties were recruited from community advertisements and referrals from an urban clinic.

Participants who were moderately to highly sedentary and had adequate energy intakes were eligible. Upon entry, children and their caregivers completed questionnaires and a random assignment occurred. Children with documented night-time sleep disturbance (Istanbul Children's Somnology Questionnaire score $\geq 4/32$) were randomly assigned to an intervention or a placebo group for 12 weeks. Sleep data were collected by actigraphy for 2 weeks prior to intervention and by actigraphy and parental night-time telephone call interviews during the treatment phase. A total of 73 children were assessed for eligibility and were equally randomized.

The randomized group (n = 33, fish oil; n = 36, placebo) had no differences for demographics (p = 0.78) except age (p = 0.02). There were no differences in the actigraphy variables across the fish oil (n = 32) and placebo ($n = 30$) groups ($p = 0.26$)
