Systematic Review and meta-analysis of the spontaneous resolution of transient neonatal hyperinsulinism. Transient neonatal hyperinsulinism (TNH) resolves spontaneously within a short period of time. As recurrent episodes of hypoglycemia seem to be a risk factor for neurodevelopmental disability, physicians need to know the incidence of spontaneous resolution. Our aim was to evaluate the incidence of spontaneous resolution in TNH. A systematic review and meta-analysis of studies describing the spontaneous resolution of TNH was performed. Three electronic databases were searched from 1966 to August 2016. Data were extracted from 11 studies with a total of 4421 cases of TNH, and analyzed using random-effect meta-analysis. The pooled incidence of spontaneous resolution in TNH was 34.7% (95% confidence interval [CI] 28.6-41.3). Spontaneous resolution was more common in isolated rather than syndromic TNH. No significant association was found between spontaneous resolution and patient factors, such as gestational age, sex, birth weight, or diagnosis at presentation. Spontaneous resolution in TNH requires further study. Careful follow-up for patients with recurrent hypoglycemia or hypoglycemic episodes in the post-episodes is mandatory.

Back in December, Obama launched his “Finnish Pediatric Care Moms” bike race along the same course as the Tour de France. I made my 2011 arrival in France as a poor historian, so I didn’t know at the time that the Tour, in fact, had begun the week before. The idea was for Americans to support the Obama administration and improve their health care in 2012. The only problem was that with millions of people there the same time, Obama was limited to a six-person team — just like our baseball team. I had to bring along my lame foreign PCV (“pediatric compassionate volunteer”). Next week, I’ll bring along a bicycle! (I’ll also bring along my two dogs, Cleo and Coco.) * * * * * P.S. This image was snapped on the bike path. I’m sure Barack Obama is fit. I’m not saying he’s “pediatric” or “compassionate.” Q: Migrating VirtualBox VMs to ESXi 6.5 I’m using VirtualBox VMs for some of my test suites, due to our need to install various VMware ESXi hypervisor guest agents. Recently I found out my VMware server virtual machines were upgraded to ESXi 6.5 and ESXi 6.5 has lot of change in the configuration management (VMware Update Manager). I have used VMware PowerCLI to migrate VirtualBox VMs to ESXi, but I found that VirtualBox still requires updates to be installed on the VMs for ESXi to communicate with VirtualBox. Is there any way, apart from the manual installation, in which VirtualBox VMs can be migrated
