In the game, players will be able to instantly readjust their attacking motion by selecting the speed (vigor) of their runs, which will affect how much of the ball is covered when running through the enemy defense. Their passing also becomes a lot more realistic with the introduction of the Player Impact Engine. This is a new, physics-based intelligence engine that enhances ball physics and enables players to intercept and guide the ball with much greater accuracy. On the defensive side, players can adjust their positioning, use the new "Fouled" system that marks players with yellow and red cards, and make tactical substitutions. FIFA 22 is the sequel to FIFA 17, and is arriving on September 28 for PlayStation 4, Xbox One, PlayStation 3, Xbox 360, and PC. Check out the video for more details on the new game's features.
