The problem is the remote server must install msdtc. It seems to me like the best (only) way to connect to an MSSQL server is to install msdtc. However, I'm having a little trouble with that method. I run the following line: Install-SPSolution.\MySqlMySqlSP.wsp but I get the error: Scripting can only be used to solve simple or moderate complexity problems. Consider using Windows System Management Instrumentation (SMI) to perform more complex management tasks. So I tried running the following: Invoke-Command -ScriptBlock { New-SqlConnection -ServerInstance $args[0] -Database $args[1] -Username $args[2] -Password $args[3] } -ArgumentList $MSSQL_SERVER, "MySqlConnection", $MYSQL_USER, $MYSQL_PASSWORD, $MYSQL_DB The error that I got was: The pipe endpoint is not registered on the local machine. So I found this: [Microsoft.SqlServer.Management.Sdk.Sfc]::EnableService -Name EnableSQLInstanceLocator [Microsoft.SqlServer.Management.Sdk.Sfc]::EnsureSqlInstanceLocatorIsInstalled -Name "SQLExtended" which was able to fix the "pipe endpoint is not registered on the local machine" error. Now I'm having a new error: Could not find installable ISAM. I can login to the SQL server using SQL Server Management Studio just fine but I cannot open a new connection using PowerShell or Invoke-SqlConnection. Any ideas on how to connect to the MSSQL server without having to install the management tool? I know I can run the command on the remote server to install SQL 595f342e71
