descargar libro la antorcha y la espada de rick joyner of his death, especially at camp casey, an nco training camp near fort hood, texas, inspired the book, originally titled antorcha y la espada. i felt as if somebody gave me a sword of light and fire and then said, "just cut off your hand." at that moment, i realized that it had been given to me to die on that morning, to die for my country, to die because i had to keep the promise that a president of the united states made to a young man who had not yet been president of the united states when he promised to give him a chance to serve. i felt such power in this sword that i said, "never let this chance slip away," and i became a commander in chief on that day. in that sense, my dreams were fulfilled. i actually met with the man who took me aside and told me that this sword was not for fighting, but for faith. he said, "the sword is not a gift you fight with, but a gift you use to fight with." it was the first time in my life that i understood the great interior voice, and i understood that the interior voice was to be heard. and then i said, "who was this man? where are his arms? how can i tell people about him?" he said, "you don't need arms to tell people about him. you need a sword." and i became one of the people of whom i had always heard so much in the past. i began to hope and to dream with people who were unknown to me in the past. i began to have a sense of what the roman poet had said: "wounded, i wear myself out to find a man who shares my heart." the man who said that is my hero, and he is not joseph or martin luther king or even ronald reagan. he is a man who is always worthy of our hope and our trust. and that man will not be silenced. now, my friends, the people who are in every generation and every generation come along, and they think they can change the world; they think they can change their own world. they look to the world for a better life. but we come with that hope in our own hearts, in our own ability to change the world. the moment that you think that you have a better right to solve the world's problems than other people, you have failed to understand who you are, because you are a child of god. you have been called to change the world. but you must change yourself first. then you will be able to change the world, and the gospel is the power to do so. those who follow this gospel will be able to change. and if you really hold on to the hope of this gospel, you will not only hold on to hope but you will experience. we are sharing this gospel with you as we go to the people of the world as our vocation. and to those who are affected by the gospel, it is the power to change. and when i tell you that this gospel can change you, i don't mean that you will be less burdened. on the contrary, you will become a different person. you will see the world differently. but you will be committed to the gospel of jesus christ.
