There are many third-party applications can be used to download subtitles online. Even if there are a lot of services you find, you really have no idea which one is safe, and which is malicious. Some of them may even lead to many viruses. Hence, I suggest that you choose a safe online subtitle download website. If you intend to download subtitles online at YouTube or Vimeo, try to choose a website that is not named SubHub, SubHub, SubHub or similar words. Even if the website is clear, it may not be safe since it could be used by a Trojan, or it could be compromised by a hacker to steal or delete your personal data. Subtitle files are usually downloaded from online streaming websites that host its video file. Some of them may use different formats. For example, YouTube supports WebVTT while Vimeo supports SRT, so if you download an YouTube.webvtt subtitle file, you should rename it as an SRT for better importing to Vimeo. One key reason why Downsub is so popular is it offers the largest subtitle database with support for online videos. This is relatively difference from some other subtitle sites in our list that are born for pretty much any movie or TV show. With the free web application, you can download subtitles directly from YouTube, Facebook, Viki, Vlive, VIU, and other online streaming contents. It seems unlikely to get a virus from a subtitle file since it is just a file full of text. To be frank, many movie subtitles you downloaded may open doors to hackers to completely take over your computer. This is because there are 25 types of subtitle file, popular media players or services like VLC, Kodi, Popcorn Time try to stretch themselves to fit the case, thus increasing vulnerabilities. Whats worse, most anti-virus software may fail to read the thread because of the nature of subtitle files.
