Polymorphisms in the angiotensin-converting enzyme gene and blood pressure control in normotensive blacks. Previous studies on the angiotensin-converting enzyme (ACE) gene and blood pressure (BP) regulation have examined white, black, and Asian populations, but there is little agreement about the number or nature of the associations in African populations. The objectives of the present study were (1) to determine the frequencies of alleles and genotypes of the ACE insertion/deletion (I/D) polymorphism in African-Americans with different degrees of BP regulation and (2) to assess the relationship of the ACE genotypes to changes in BP during therapy. DNA was extracted from the samples of 158 subjects [nonsuppressor/nonsuppressor (NS/NS), 12 subjects; suppressor/nonsuppressor (S/NS), 31; nonsuppressor/suppressor (NS/S), 20; and suppressor/suppressor (S/S), 45]. The ACE genotypes were determined by means of polymerase chain reaction amplification and subsequent digestion with the restriction enzyme MspI. The mean BP of the NS/NS genotype was 99.5 +/- 9.2/60.6 +/- 6.5 mm Hg, for the S/NS genotype was 110.6 +/- 11.0/66.5 +/- 6.5 mm Hg, and for the S/S genotype was 106.5 +/- 11.4/64.0 +/- 7.2 mm Hg. There was no significant effect of the genotypes on BP variation with antihypertensive therapy (treatment for 1 year, > or = 25 mm Hg decrease in baseline BP during the year). A comparison of the homozygous S and D genotypes demonstrated no significant difference in BP. In conclusion, there were no significant differences in BP between subjects with different genotypes at the ACE locus. We speculate that the ACE I/D polymorphism may have a minor effect on BP regulation in blacks and may be less important than the renin-angiotensin system in BP regulation.-th/0512365\].
